

1 Rule 11-301. Utah Standards of Judicial Professionalism and Civility.

2 Preamble

3 Judges are tasked with the important responsibility of presiding over adversarial judicial proceedings.
4 In such proceedings the rights, responsibilities, liberties, and even lives of the parties may hang in the 5 balance. And in light of these high stakes, conflict and tension are inevitable—to some degree even 6 expected in a system that depends on an element of adversariness in the search for truth and justice.

7 Even in the adversary process, we expect the parties and their counsel to follow basic principles of 8 civility and professionalism. In Utah, our Standards of Professionalism and Civility represent our attempt 9 to articulate those principles for members of the Utah Bar. The standards below state a parallel set of 10 principles for the judiciary.

11 Our judges should aspire to a high level of professionalism and civility in the performance of their 12 judicial responsibilities. When judges display unprofessional or uncivil conduct, they undermine the goal
13 of securing equal justice for all under the law. Conversely, when judges model civil and professional 14 behavior, the system they preside over is elevated as all participants in the process are inevitably 15 impacted by those who oversee it.

16 The general aspiration for professionalism and civility is only a beginning. That aspiration begs 17 important questions regarding the nature of the judge's role in a system in which conflict and tension are 18 inevitable and in which the judge may be called upon to make difficult determinations involving guilt, 19 individual responsibility, credibility, state of mind, and relative culpability.

20 The aspiration for professionalism and civility in the judiciary must be tempered by the occasional 21 need for a judge to stand up to obstinacy or insubordination with sharpness and even severity. In some 22 instances a party's behavior or position cannot appropriately be dealt with through docility and good
23 cheer. At times it will be the proper role of a judge, as the voice of the law in the face of a party's blatant 24 disregard of it, to come down harshly. In a criminal proceeding involving a convicted child sex abuser who 25 refuses to acknowledge responsibility, for example, a judge may properly find it necessary to utter the 26 unmistakably grave terms of chastisement—with a goal of awakening the defendant to the need to seek 27 help and make fundamental changes. Alternatively, in a juvenile court matter in which an abusive or 28 neglectful parent is the root source of an adolescent's legal problems, a judge may determine that the 29 only path to a lasting resolution of the matter is to employ the terms and tone of austerity. And judges 30 generally are called upon to make determinations of credibility; that core responsibility cannot be shunned
31 because it might have a tendency to offend.

32 The aspiration for professionalism and civility must also leave room for a range of personalities and 33 temperaments among our judges. The judicial function is performed by individual human beings with 34 discretion to apply the law to new facts. Judges must be permitted to do so in a manner consistent with 35 their individual temperament and personality. Our standards are not intended to prescribe a single 36 orthodoxy of temperament or personality.

37 The standards below seek to balance these competing objectives. They establish some bright lines 38 that should never be crossed, regardless of a judge's temperament or personality and even in the most 39 difficult circumstances. And they distinguish appropriate exercises of sharpness or severity (those with a 40 due purpose in law, in the rules of procedure, or in the judge's efforts to maintain order and decorum) 41 from those that are merely gratuitous (lacking any proper basis, and employed out of personal spite or 42 animosity).

43 These standards are aspirational. They are not intended to prescribe legal standards to be invoked in 44 litigation or as a basis for sanctions or penalties to be imposed against judges (except insofar as they 45 may merely reiterate standards prescribed elsewhere that establish an independent basis for sanctions).

46 Standards

47 (1) Judges will refrain from manifesting or acting upon racial, gender, or other improper bias or 48 prejudice toward any participant in the legal process.

49 (2) Judges will not use language in oral or written communications, orders, or opinions that is profane 50 or that gratuitously demeans or humiliates an attorney, litigant, witness, or another judge, recognizing,
51 however, that judges are sometimes expected to stand up to obstinacy or insubordination with sharpness
52 and even severity, and that the difficult legal or factual determinations they make might produce a 53 demeaning or humiliating effect on a participant in the judicial process.

54 (3) Judges will not disparage the integrity, motives, intelligence, morals, ethics, or personal behavior 55 of an attorney, litigant, witness, or another judge except in circumstances where such matters are in 56 furtherance of a judge's responsibilities or are otherwise relevant under the governing law or rules of 57 procedure. Judges will not impugn the integrity or professionalism of any lawyer on the basis of the client 58 or cause which the lawyer represents.

59 (4) Judges will avoid impermissible ex parte communications.

60 (5) Judges will not adopt procedures aimed at delaying the resolution of proceedings before them or 61 at compounding litigation expenses unnecessarily.

62 (6) Judges will endeavor to begin judicial proceedings on time and to provide reasonable notice if 63 necessary to apprise the parties, recognizing that circumstances beyond the judge's control may impact 64 the goal of punctuality.

65 (7) Judges will give issues in controversy thoughtful and impartial analysis and consideration, 66 recognizing the corresponding prerogative and responsibility to promote their just, speedy, and 67 inexpensive resolution.

68 (8) Judges will recognize that a party has a right to a fair and impartial hearing, and a right to present
69 its cause within the limits established by law. Judges will allow lawyers or parties, within reasonable time 70 limits, to present proper arguments and to make a complete and accurate record.

71 (9) In all legal proceedings, judges will direct parties, attorneys, and other participants to refrain from 72 uncivil conduct. Judges who observe uncivil conduct or receive a reliable report of uncivil conduct will 73 take corrective action as the judge deems appropriate.

74 (10) Judges will cooperate with other judges to ensure the successful management of the court as a
75 system as well as the judge's individual docket.
